SASSY LITIGATIONS

Mediation can be used to diffuse conflicts in business, landlord/tenant, and family law cases.

Why Mediation?

Mediation is a wonderful alternative to litigation for several reasons:

It's cheaper. Mediation costs a fraction of what a court battle does.

It's faster. Mediation is typically done in a in a few hours or a day.

It's private. What happens in mediation stays in mediation. Your life will not become public record like in court.

You're in control. Instead of leaving it up to a judge you get to decide your outcome.

It keeps the relationships intact. Litigation is designed to be hostile. If you what to save the relationship, like if you have children with the opposing party, then mediation is beneficial since it is designed to be amicable.

What is Pro Se Mediation?

Pro Se is just a fancy phrase for not represented by an attorney. With Pro Se mediation lawyers are not needed or required. All that is needed is a willingness to try.

How It Works?

All mediation packages are flat fees. You can learn more about packages and fees here. Mediation fees are typically split between the parties. Each side must submit a brief write up on what it is they hope to gain. Mediation can be done in person or if you are you technologically savvy it can be done via video conference or phone. You never have to leave your home or office. Mediation is typically done using the "shuttle" method. Meaning the parties are separate.
